

Preseason Custom Trout Fly Workshop Offered by Susquehanna TU

The public is invited to come to a informational workshop just before the opening of trout season at which local expert fly tiers will be available to tie custom flies on request and answer your questions about fly patterns and places that will be good for early season trout fishing. This will be a great opportunity for those wishing to get involved in the sport to pick up some advice and a few flies that members of Susquehanna Chapter of Trout Unlimited are pleased to share. Circle your calendar for April 13th at 7:00 p.m. at the Fellowship Hall at the rear of the First Presbyterian Church at the corner of East Third and Mulberry Sts.in Williamsport.

THE SALE WILL BE OPEN TO TROUT UNLIMITED MEMBERS ONLY APRIL 8
FROM 6PM – 8:30 PM AND APRIL 9 FROM 9AM – 10AM (MUST PROVIDE PROOF OF TU MEMBERSHIP). APPLICATIONS WILL BE AVAILABLE TO JOIN TROUT
UNLIMITED AT A SPECIAL RATE OF $17.50

Recipe of the Month

Dutch Oven Trout

6 8 inch trout 12 sl Bacon 1 ts Ground pepper

Filet the trout. Lay three slices of bacon on the bottom of a Dutch Oven, put 1/2 a trout, flesh-side-down, on each slice. Sprinkle pepper lightly over upper sides of fish. Arrange a second layer of bacon and fish at right angles to the first, and continue to arrange other layers, each at right angles to one below it, until all the fish halves are in the pot. Cover the Dutch Oven, bury in coals, cook 35-40 minutes. Serve a slice of bacon with each half-fish.

Art Neumann, a Founding Father of Trout Unlimited, Has Passed Away

SAGINAW, Mich.— Art Neumann, one of the original 16 Michigan anglers who came together on the banks of the Au Sable River and founded Trout Unlimited in 1959, died Monday, March 21, leaving behind a legacy that has stretched for decades and resulted in some of the most important conservation work ever done in the United States.

He was 99 years old.

Neumann was an integral part of the conception of TU, and played uniquely critical roles in early advocacy efforts and the expansion of TU from a Michigan-based organization to a national conservation giant. He was an effective grassroots mobilizer for the early effort to protect the Au Sable from habitat degradation and overstocking in the 1950s and 1960s. He lectured customers in his Saginaw fly shop on their responsibilities for protecting what they loved, and he traveled the country giving stump speeches to waves of new members, creating new chapters all across America in his role as the first executive director of TU.

"What Art did was to build an institution—an institution that began with him and a handful of other people along the banks of the Au Sable River who were tired of the state's masking habitat degradation through stocking," said Chris Wood, TU's president and CEO. "Today, the 'house that Art built' includes 400 chapters, over 155,000 members and 240 scientists, bi-

Neumann was one of several anglers who helped TU grow into national prominence, and his role was one of a motivator who inspired others to get behind the efforts to protect the fish and the fishing they loved. For his efforts, he was inducted into the Fly Fishing Hall of Fame in 2008.

ologists and other professional staff who serve to make fishing, and the places that fish live, better."

"All of the founders played unique roles. Some were the scientists, some played the role of politicians, others the administrators and financiers," said Dr. Bryan Burroughs, executive director of Michigan Trout Unlimited. "Among them, Art was the activist, orator, mobilizer, engager, recruiter and grassroots builder. His skills and passion for this work were essential to the organization's success. TU would not be what it is today, and would not have been able to do what it does for our trout and salmon, if it were not for Art Neumann."

Today, TU is perhaps the most effective conservation organization in America. It's volunteers contribute upwards of 700,000 hours of service every year, and over the course of it's 57-year history, it has restored thousands upon thousands of river miles, worked in the halls of government to permanently protect millions of acres of trout and salmon habitat and helped introduce thousands of Americans to fishing and conservation.

"Art lived a long life, built an institution to last, got to watch the seeds he planted grow, and left the world better than he found it," said John Walters, chairman of Michigan Trout Unlimited. "That's a success, and a life worth celebrating. Rest in peace Art."

Neumann is known for penning the "Philosophy of Trout Unlimited", which can be viewed online. It's best summarized by the saying, "Take care of the fish and the fishing will take care of itself."

Pubic Comments wanted to Foster Joseph Sayers Lake

At the recent meeting of the PFBC, "Commissioners approved for public comment a proposal to change angling regulations for crappie at Foster Joseph Sayers Lake at Bald Eagle State Park in Centre County.

"The lake is a popular crappie fishery with high angler use and harvest and it's not reaching its full potential under the current regulations," said Jason Detar, Chief of the PFBC Division of Fisheries Management. "Only about 8 percent of the crappies in our fishery surveys meet the current legal size of 9 inches or longer. The majority of adult crappies collected during our fishery surveys are in the 7-inch to 8-inch range, and anglers want to harvest some of these fish."

Currently, the daily limit for crappies is 20 and the fish must be at least 9 inches long. Under the proposed changes, anglers would be allowed a daily creel limit of 10, of which no more than five can be over 9 inches.

"The changes would allow anglers to still harvest some of the larger fish which are 9 inches or longer, as well as some of the smaller fish which are not currently available to harvest," added Detar. "The goal is to increase the overall numbers of 9-inch and longer crappies by reducing some of the harvest of these fish, and by thinning the numbers of 7-inch and 8-inch fish through angler harvest."

The PFBC held a public meeting about the proposal last month at the state park's Environmental Learning Center. A majority of the participants at the meeting supported a change in the regulations. Public comments will now be accepted for 30 days after the proposal is published in the PA Bulletin. If adopted on final rulemaking, the amendment will go into effect on Jan. 1, 2017."

To comment on this proposal, please go to http://fishandboat.com/regcomments/index.htm. This information was taken from the PFBC website.

TAKING TROUT ON LURES

Small lures are very effective for taking early-season trout. Because S-L-O-W" is the keyword in lure presentation in springtime's cold waters, it is important to fish lures that have good action at very slow retrieve speeds. The flash and vibration created by weighted spinners with broad, flat, French-style blades are especially good spring trout lures.

Accurate casting is always important when fishing lures for stream trout, but accuracy carries even more weight early in the season. Trout will not move far in the chilly water to intercept or chase a lure. Muddy or stained water also lowers their ability to see the lure.

In addition to representing food, flashy lures also appeal to the trout's curiosity. It pays anglers dividends to cover a lot of the stream. Present the lure often and with broad coverage upstream of holding areas and cover so that many trout will see your spinner as you retrieve the lure downstream.

You can also tease sluggish trout to bite. Sneak up even with, or slightly beyond, the likely holding area when the stream size and water turbidity allow you to stay undetected. Cast the lure across the stream, let it sink a bit, and sweep it in front of the trout. The sudden increase in lure speed can entice a fish to strike, especially when presented close to trout.

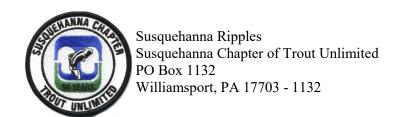

Ultralight spinning rod-and-reel combos are ideal outfits for both bait- and lure-fishing for early-spring stream trout. I prefer a rod a bit longer — 6 to 6 1/2 feet — than the more common 5-foot lengths to make casting and line control easier. And spinning reels of high quality should be used — those with a sturdy bail system to support the many short casts you'll make each outing. High-quality reels also operate smoothly and easily in cold weather.
